Introduction

Caregiving may be the most important job in our society. Everyone needs care as infants and most of us will need some kind of care at the end of our lives. At both ends of our lives caregiving is most often done in the family setting.

Caring for adults involves challenges not seen with children. Often the “caring” is being done by spouses or adult children who have a variety of needs and responsibilities outside of that “caring” role. Too often the caregiver neglects his or her own needs, resulting in the caregiver’s own health crisis. Many caregivers view looking for help as weakness or renegeing on a promise to care for their loved one.

Help for caregivers to continue in their roles can be as little as finding helpful information and as much as having someone else provide care, either temporarily or on a long term basis. Respite services are those services that allow a caregiver to have time away from his or her loved one to recharge their physical and emotional “batteries”. The services can be performed informally by other family and friends, through a fee-based agency, or through limited subsidized programs.

This Resource Guide is intended to be a point of entry to the possibilities of receiving various levels of assistance in doing the very important role of caregiving. It was developed to assist caregivers of elders and disabled persons and contains partial lists of resources in the Stanislaus County area. The information provided does not reflect an endorsement of any particular agency.

Caregiver Frequently Asked Questions

Question: I am a family caregiver, does that make me a mandated reporter for elder abuse? What is a mandated reporter and who do I call if I suspect abuse?

Answer: Under California law (Welfare & Institutions Code 15630) if you are a caregiver (paid or unpaid), you are a mandated reporter of suspected elder or dependent adult abuse. You would make reports to Stanislaus County Adult Protective Services (209-558-2637) or the Long Term Care Ombudsman program, (for anyone living in assisted living or skilled nursing facilities; 209-529-3784). All reports of suspected abuse are strictly confidential –your identity as a reporter will not be disclosed! It is important to remember that a report should be made if you suspect abuse has or is occurring. Reports can also be made using the state SOC341, available online at: www.dss.cahwnet.gov/cdssweb/entres/forms/English/SOC341.pdf

Others who are mandated to report include: emergency responders, health practitioners, clergy members, and anyone who has “care and custody” (even temporarily) of an elder or dependent adult.
